JUDGE PARKER

Puts the Republicans on the Defensive.

Defies Cortelyou to Deny That the Administration is in Collision With the Trusts.

New York, Nov. 3.—The earnest and vigorous attack of Judge Parker upon the combination of the Administration with the trusts and the securing of a large campaign fund, notoriously collected to debauch the ballot and again purchase the presidency, has aroused the people here to an extent never before known, and there appears to be a settled determination to defeat the desperate and corrupt designs of the Republican managers.

These Republicans, who have been laughing and sneering at the Democratic presidential candidate as a man afraid to talk and say things, are now amazed at the boldness of his charge and in rage over his plain, outspoken words. They no longer consider him the "silent man," for within the last ten days he has put them all, including every member of the Roosevelt cabinet, and every little whisper-snapper connected with the Imperial Government at Washington, on the defensive, and they are running over each other in their vain attempt to answer or break the force of the distinguished New York jurist. They have suddenly discovered that in the Democratic candidate they have waked up the wrong man, and that he is giving him the hot end of the poker to hold, and that it is an agonizing job. They also find that all the strenuous mankind is not to be found alone in the occupant of the White House, but there is another New York Richmond in the field, and that he has the courage of his convictions and dare express them. He charges boldly that the administration is in league with the trusts, and to be protected from the enforcement of the laws of the land these powerful trust magnates, who are grinding the people down by high prices on their products, are paying over to the National Republican Committee large sums of money to buy the poor, ignorant devils in doubtful States known as flatters.

Defies Cortelyou.

Furthermore, Judge Parker defies Cortelyou to deny the charges, for he is in possession of facts to prove all he says. The question now is, can the money of the trusts carry out the wicked purpose designed. This remains to be seen, but, anyhow, there is no mistaking the feeling here and the intense indignation aroused over the open charges of Judge Parker. New York and New Jersey are already aflame at the situation, and Connecticut will be before these lines are received. The people talk as if they were alive to the great danger confronting them. They know that the high cost they pay for absolutely all that they eat and wear is fixed by these trusts, and if these trusts win next Tuesday it means the exhaustion of all their hard-earned savings to keep their families from starving and freezing, and, in the end, pauperism.

This is true, for if Roosevelt is elected these trusts can raise prices on everything but labor, and of this there is not a doubt. The workmen of New York see and realize this, and that is why thousands and tens of thousands of them in this great city will march to the polls on election day and cast their ballots for the man who has had the nerve to denounce Wall street and the trust magnates in their den and champion the cause of the common people. And these honest, hard-working men will roll up a tremendous majority for the candidacy of a man who favors a government of the people and for the people, and against an aristocracy who favor a splendid form of government solely for the benefit of the rich and mighty who roll in wealth gained from the toil of the poorer classes.

FIVE PRISONERS

Sentenced to Eddyville and One To Frankfort.

Jury Cases Finished First of the Week and Court Adjourns Tomorrow.

Sentence was yesterday passed on six of the parties convicted at this term of Circuit Court. The names, offenses and terms follow: Charles Tucker, grand larceny, two and one-half years; Will Whitfield, grand larceny, three years; John Henry Cole, chicken stealing, fifteen months; George Roach, malicious shooting, with intent to kill, one year; Robt. Alsop, alias Robt. Jackson, obtaining property under false pretenses, one year; Georgia Jackson, housebreaking, two years.

All of the parties are colored. Polly Wallace, alias Polly Jackson, who was convicted of housebreaking and given one year in the penitentiary, was granted a new trial and bond fixed at $100. The five men sentenced will be taken to Eddyville this morning, and the woman will be taken to Frankfort.

The indictment against Lewis Garrett, charged with shooting and wounding with intent to kill, was dismissed "for want of any witnesses to prosecute, none having been found by officers."

In the case of Ed Gladdish the prosecution was continued to the next term.

In the suit of Berry against Kistner, the plaintiff was awarded $20 damages. It was a suit on a contract.

All the jury cases for this term were finished Monday and the jurors were dismissed and paid off.

Court will adjourn either this afternoon or tomorrow.

Ophthalmoscope and Retinoscope - Combined.

An up-to-date instrument for the diagnosis of the pathological condition of the interior of the eye without the use of a dark room or mydriatics to dilate the pupil. By its use all errors of refraction are detected and measured to an absolute certainty, without asking the patient any question—thereby leaving the operator independent of the intelligence of the patient (foresight or children). It is the latest and most wonderful production of optical science. By its use the retina (veins and arteries), is seen as clearly as the patient's face. This is a costly instrument, but as I have been always deeply interested, and made a specialty of examining and fitting of glasses to the eye. I have kept up to date with the latest and best methods and instruments and feel that the best—indeed the only—method of examining the eye. They may rest assured that they will get the latest and best service obtainable anywhere—derived from long years of practical experience with up-to-date appliances and instruments. Respectfully,

SALADIN AND THE CHERUB.

BY FISHER AMES, JR.

When Thomas Freshback Mas ters arrived at Hubbard's ostrich ranch and asked for work, big, bulging Scoville, the overseer, began by hounding him, and ended by giving him a job. At the same time he assured the "cherub," as the boy came to be called for obvious reasons, that he did so only because he was very short of hands. He had never met a man wearing pink cheeks and yellow hair that was as useful as a peat-ric-log. He added, with some unnecessary profanity, that it did not matter much anyway. Probably Saladin or Trumpler would rid the ranch of the newcomer in a week or so.

The cherub had smiled back at him steadily, and although neither of them realized it, it was the smile that had turned the scales.

It was shortly after the rainy season. The cocks in the large corral were just beginning to choose their mates. As fast as the various pairs came to a mutual understanding, they were removed to smaller pens, where they might go to housekeeping undisturbed.

Saladin was one of the last to make his selection. He was the biggest cock on the farm. Eight feet in height and weighing more than three hundred pounds, he was a magnificent specimen of ostrich strength. His great long-shaped body jet black save where in the wing tips and the feet, was supported on broad, bare thighs of lead gray. His eyes were unusually large and brilliant, but there was nothing soft in their light. He looked on keeper and fowl with a look of keenest and least ostrich aloofness, and he was always ready to defend his dignity with a swift blow of his long, slender foot.

Saladin's corral was a quarter of an acre in extent. For two days he trotted around it with a dignity almost menacing to the few who knew every inch of the new home. On the third day he held a short consultation with the hen. The meek creature evidently accepted his suggestions without comment, for the pair immediately began to build their nest.

It was nothing but a saucer-shaped depression, a yard wide and a foot deep, scraped in the sandy loam. Saladin did most of the work, lying on his breast bone and revolving slowly while he kicked it.

The cherub, leaning over the rail, greatly admired this demonstration of fastidious feeling. It seemed as if domestic life might exert a softening influence upon the big cock. He made a few advances with some appetizing saucer feet, but Saladin refused them all with contemptuous tosses.

When the first egg came, the cherub was as excited as the prospective parents. Every other day after that he hounded another, until there were three huge, three-pounded eggs in the nest. Then the brooding began, and Saladin's temper became more violent than ever.

From nine o'clock in the morning until four in the afternoon the hen crouched on the nest, her long neck outstretched in the sand, her body as quiet and unobtrusive as some gray sea slug. When she approached or left her eggs she went through a variety of cunning maneuvers, calculated to deceive a possible watcher. All this she did because her wild ancestors had done her, while the cherub's trickery seemed to reduce her instincts.

Every day at four o'clock the hen left the nest, and Saladin took her place. There he would remain all night, his black bulk invisible in the darkness, while his wife, whose lighter colored plumage betrayed her presence, rested some little distance away.

"How's that two-legged nile, Saladin, getting on?" the overseer asked the cherub, one afternoon. "I see you've got all your limbs yep."

"Well," said the cherub, "he and the hen are kind of nervous like. And they're sitting harder than ever."

The overseer began checking off on his fingers:

"Um—over five weeks. About time for the chicks, I reckon. I'll walk down with you and have a look at 'em."

It was Saladin's hour on the nest. The great cock turned his head slightly as they came up to the fence, and the brilliant, unwinking eyes glared with hostility. The cherub had never appreciated before how viperine was the pose of the long, nude neck and the shallow, flattened head. The bird was perfectly motionless, except for a slow, unpleasant pulsation of the throat.

"Hello!" exclaimed Scoville. "There's an egg on there."

"It wasn't there this morning," said the cherub, looking with perplexity at the dirty, gray globe lying forlornly some 20 feet from the nest.

"I reckon they found it was unfertilized and kicked it out," said Scoville. "I'd like to get that. The tomists give a dollar apiece for 'em after they're blown and polished. If it's left there one of those wooden-legged freaks 'll step on it sure as fate."

"Saladin might object, though," suggested the cherub.

"Oh, I don't think," replied the overseer. "He knows me pretty well, and besides, he ain't anxious to leave the nest of the clutch now he can hear the young ones stirring."

He leaped over the fence, chewing a straw thoughtfully, while the cherub passed on to the next enclosure. The unfertilized eggs were Scoville's perquisite, and the longer he gazed at this one the more its aspect assumed that of a huge silver dollar.

"I'll risk it," he muttered, and slipped under the rail.

He walked gingerly at first, but as the cock made no sign of resentment at the intrusion, he advanced with more confidence.

As he stooped to lift the great shell, his watching eye detected an almost imperceptible tremor run up the rigid neck, and a hiss, like the sharp escape of steam, burst from the beak. A man of Scoville's experience should have accepted the warning and decamped at once, but, thick-headed by enough, he paused, stooping over the egg, until his chance was lost.

Saladin rose as if on springs, and then Scoville turned and snatching off his horse coat as he went. With a few ground-devouring strides, the cock caught up with his victim. Scoville wheeled and flung his coat at the waving head, but it missed its mark.

The cherub heard something like the sickening sound of a box of tin landing on the bare flesh of an adversary, and turned in time to see the overseer rolling in the sand like a shot rabbit.

The double rail of the fence struck the cherub just then as a gleaming inefficient barrier. He instinctively started to run. But in spite of his dazed hair and general immaturity of expression, the boy possessed courage. When the first shock had passed he stopped and began to retrace his steps, his heart thumping strangely.

He carried one of those long forked sticks with which all the attendants were supplied. To his inexperienced hand it seemed a ridiculous weapon to use against 300 pounds of kicking force and muscles, but he knew, theoretically, that an ostrich could be subdued if the fork were applied to the long, tender neck with sufficient force to choke it.

The overseer lay as he had fallen, face down and with one crumpled arm dug forward. Saladin was performing a crazy dance about the prostrate figure; but as the cherub stooped under the rail, the great ostrich paused and greeted him with three booming notes, lion-like in their vibrant bass.

The cherub's smile was a travesty of its usual cheerful self, but he advanced steadily, poking on the stick before him.

"Shoo, there! Get out!" he shouted, as if Saladin were some giant hen.

The overseer made a feeble movement, and, as the cherub glanced downward for the fraction of a second, he saw a pair of eyes rolled beseechingly up at him. Scoville did not look as if he were badly hurt, but fear was written plainly on his face. The consciousness that the bulky, bearded man was a craven somewhat steadied the boy's nerves.

The next moment Saladin charged, his wings spread out like fans and every plume on his bulk up body bristling. The cherub stood firm, and thrust so well that the fork caught the cock fair in the throat, forcing the little neck back.

One of the big, bony legs drew up, and came down in a stroke too quick for the eye to follow, but the rail foot nail cut nothing but the air, and Saladin, choked by the pressure of the fork, wheeled and ran off toward the nest.

"Work back toward the fence—sweep facing him!" said Scoville. "Get up and help me!" cried the cherub, sharply.

"Can't. He's lost my ribs!" whined the overseer. "Besides, I haven't a stick."

He lifted himself a little and began a scuttling retreat toward the fence. Saladin uttered another of his deep roars and swept down upon them. He paid no attention to Scoville, but harried himself at the cherub. So swift was the charge that the boy was not able to take proper aim with his slender weapon.

He felt that he was going to miss, and springing aside just in time to avoid the ferocious downward blow, the cock's shoulder struck him and hurled him over. As he struck the sand he flattened in like a hiding quail.

The big, horny, hoof-like feet thudded furiously close to his head. Saladin was in an ecstasy of anger. He could not kick the cherub so long as the latter lay upon the ground, but he could stamp upon him.

Fortunately for the cherub, the wits of the great bird were not equal to his strength. After a vicious stamp or so, he came to the erroneous conclusion that he could finish his victim sooner by rolling on him.

Down he dropped on his knees, and threw his heavy weight on the cherub's back, almost crushing in one of the kicking feet struck him in the leg, and slit cloth and skin as if with a knife.

In his rolling, Saladin's neck whipped from one side to the other over the cherub's head. Choosing the moment when the cock had rolled nearly clear of him, the cherub concentrated all his power in an upward heave that threw the bird from his back. Then with one hand he made a quick clutch at the extended neck.

As his fingers closed on the coarse, naked skin, he brought his other hand into play, and strengthened his hold. The long neck writhed like a snake, and Saladin bobbed up with his feet and bent his wings on the ground in a violent effort to free himself.

The cherub clung like a bull-dog, his face and eyes sting with flying sand and his muscles aching under the strain.

Presently the bird's struggles lessened. The outstretched wings fluttered more and more feebly, the head sank, and a grayish membrane clouded the big eyes. At last the head fell limply on the sand.

"You've given him his dose, Masters. Don't kill him!" shouted the overseer from the safe side of the fence.

The cherub warily loosened his stiffened fingers; but Saladin lay motionless, humped in the last.

The boy tottered to the fence, breathing hard.

"Hurt any?" asked Scoville.

"Don't think so. I'm tuckered out, though," and the cherub smiled his old boyish smile.

"I reckon he's lost a rib for me," said Scoville, pointing to a gash in his flannel shirt, the edges of which were red.

There was an awkward pause. The overseer looked away and began to scratch his bristly beard. Then he turned and looked full at the cherub.

"I admit it. He knocked my nerve out," he burst forth, frankly. "No one ever says anything to me against pink cheeks and yellow hair from now on. Say, will you shake?" Youth's companion.

TO CAPTURE RATTLESNAKES.

Not Such a Difficult Feat When One Goes About it in the Right Way.

It isn't everybody who knows how to catch a rattlesnake, even should he have sudden occasion to put such knowledge in practice, says the Chicago Chronicle. The first indication of the presence of a rattler is the sharp, unmistakable rattle. The reptile is the fiercest fighter of all living creatures, never failing to give due warning of its hostile intent. Bending low and gazing among the shrubs, the dangerous one may be espied. He is curled on himself like a spiral spring, his head flat and triangular, and a fourth of his body raised out of the circles of coils and bent into the shape of a horizontal S, ready to strike with lightning rapidity. The eyes glare black and cold as the viper is poised like a tense spring, alert and ready to bury its long, needlelike poison fangs and to inject the frightful poison.

If the intruder is without striking distance and remains where he is, he is in little danger, as only in the rarest cases have the snakes been known to attack and assume the initiative. If the hunter with draws, gradually the viper assumes a position of repose, which it maintains until again threatened. But to the snake catcher the threat of the rattler is not a serious deterrent. He knows the treatment can strike only within a radius of about one-half its length. Having struck it must recoil and aim a second time before it can send out its hideous head. A six-foot stick is all that is necessary to catch the formidable snake. Pushing the end of the stick toward the reptile, the hunter watches his chance. The rattler is motionless, as if carved out of stone, only its beady, icy eyes fastened upon the end of the stick to await the proper moment to bite. When that comes there is a movement too quick for the eye to follow, and the long fangs are sunk into the stick, while the reptile, realizing its mistake at once, is already coiled up and again in a fighting attitude.

Before it can strike down comes the pile, pinning the long, squirming body to the ground, and the hunter walks boldly toward the helpless one, takes it up close behind the head, where the poison fangs cannot reach him, and puts his captive into a bag.

There are other methods of catching the rattler for instance, when the reptile is in its winter quarters and lethargic and lazy. But the manner described is the way the professional snake-catcher secures his specimens.

Punishment for Detectives.

Two Washington "detectives" were returning from Ohio with a horse thief in custody and permitted their man to escape by jumping through a car window. They wrote a report to the sheriff and promptly received instructions not to return unless they brought their prisoner with them. That was the way to talk. If two men, well armed and having the authority to shackle a prisoner, cannot bring him across the continent in a railway train it is time for them to seek some other occupation and forfeit the unusual of their official habits. The trouble is that we hold such official delinquencies too lightly. To permit a criminal to escape is as great a wrong against the public as to abscond with public funds, and punishment for the offense should be as certain in one case as it is in the other.—Portland Oregonian.

Trained Horse's Tricks.

Hans, the performing horse, which made a sensation in Berlin for a few days because it was thought he could count, spell, etc., has been proved a fraud, or his owner has. His groom has confessed. As to the counting, as long as the groom kept his eyes on the ground Hans continued stamping with a hoof. As soon as the groom looked up the horse ceased to stamp. All his tricks were done by signal.

Germ Destroyers.

COMFORTING WORDS.

Many a Hopkinsville Household Will Find Them So.

To have pains and aches of a bad back removed; to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. To tell how a great change can be brought about will prove comforting words to hundreds of Hopkinsville readers.

Mrs. J. T. Johnson, wife of J. T. Johnson, superintendent of streets, living at 108 N. Main street says: "During the latter part of last summer I noticed growing upon me a dull aching across the small of my back which kept getting worse until finally the pain became so severe that I was hardly able to walk around, and many times could not attend to my household duties. The trouble I believe came from the kidneys for I suffered from other distressing symptoms of this complaint. I was subject to the most severe headaches and frequent attacks of dizziness. I learned about Doan's Kidney Pills and my husband got a box for me at Thomas & Travers's drug store. They did me a wonderful amount of good. I do not know what I should have done if it had not been for Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The Future of Nevada.

The state of Nevada, having from various causes suffered a retrograde movement, is now again on the up-grade of advancement. No future census will show a decrease in population. On the other hand, the increase from now on in both wealth and population will be rapid and permanent. One of the best indications is the fact that men who have made money of late years from the resources of the state, are reinvesting their earnings in its industries. Reno, being to Nevada what Salt Lake is to Utah, will necessarily reap the greatest advantage from this tendency. As the commercial center and metropolis of a reawakened state, its future seems to be assured.—Clay Peters in Sunset Magazine for November.

As usual, the illustrations in the November number of the Sunset Magazine add much to the attractiveness of the publication. But the illustrations, of course, are, with all their beauty, but a minor feature; it is the literary quality that is the main attraction. A magazine of the best—in what Sunset purports to be—although it is widely circulated in the East, and the contents of the present number emphasize the fact. There are stories and poems by Western writers, and descriptions of western localities abound. The November number is one to add to the prestige of a rapidly growing magazine.

DEMOCRATS LEAD.

Supplemental Registration Adds 52 Democrats and 48 Republicans to the list.

The supplemental registration closed Wednesday night. During the three days fifty-two Democrats and forty-eight Republicans registered, making just 100. All but 10 are in Hopkinsville; Pembroke has 3, Lafayette 2, Gracey 2, Crofton 1 and Fairview 1.

Only three votes in Fairview are registered and they are the only ones on the Christian county side who can vote. The Hopkinsville total is increased from 1582 to 1672, indicating a big vote. The estimated Democratic majority of 10 on the regular registration figures has been increased a few votes. This is the first time on record that the Democrats have beaten the Republicans in both regular and supplemental registrations.

PEST HOUSE

Is Now Used To Confine All Smallpox Patients.

Located Near the Poor House With Tom Allen As Guard.

The county authorities are now acting with promptness in dealing with all smallpox cases that develop.

The pest house near the poor house, north of town, now has three or four occupants, all colored. The last of these to be put in was a negro woman, who broke out with the disease at Mr. L. L. Leavelle's farm near Beverly.

The pest house is guarded by Tom Allen, a white man who has recently recovered from the disease.

Dr. R. L. Woodard, City Health Officer, says the last case in Hopkinsville has been discharged and that the city is now free from the disease. There has been never any real danger in the city as the cases here are of a very mild character.

As noted elsewhere in today's paper, there has been a second death in the country. The first was a negro woman at Gracely. This one is a negro man at Kennedy, who caught the disease in a malignant type while at work at East St. Louis, where there have been 225 deaths in four months from smallpox.

DON'T YOU KNOW

That for more than a year, or since the Hopkinsville Steam Laundry adopted the cash system, that they have only been charging one and a half cents for collars and cuffs, which is no more than anyone in Hopkinsville charges and by far better and more genteel work. If you should pass by the Hopkinsville Steam Laundry and see any one of their 35 employees spitting on your goods, don't you know that they would be immediately discharged? Yet some people seem to like this treatment of their goods. Now if all the people in Hopkinsville don't appreciate to the fullest extent the work the Hopkinsville Steam Laundry is giving them, why we are glad to say that a large portion do appreciate it, and not only these, but thousands from all over Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi do appreciate the superior work, and for the same work that you get at one and one-half cents, these other places are glad to get at 2 1/2 cts for collars and 5 cts for cuffs. Why not ask the Southern Express agent how many pounds of goods come from Nashville and other places to the Hopkinsville steam laundry each week to be done. No hands of the Hopkinsville Steam Laundry sleep in same.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS

Reveals That "Pe-ru-na" is Calculated to Tone up the System, Restore the Functions and Procure Health."

SO SAYS PROF. L. J. MILLER, CHEMIST.

Prof. L. J. Miller, late Professor of Chemistry and Botany of the High School of Ypsilanti, Mich., writes from 3227 N. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill., as follows: "As several of my friends have spoken to me of the favorable results obtained through the use of Peru-na, especially in cases of catarrh, I examined it most thoroughly to learn its contents. "I found it composed of extracts of herbs and barks of most valuable medicinal qualities combined with other ingredients, delicately balanced, calculated to tone up the system, restore the functions and procure health. "I consider Peru-na one of the most skillfully and scientifically prepared medicines, which the public can use with safety and success."—PROF. L. J. MILLER.

A CAMPAIGN POEM.

'Tis a sorrowful fact that a man can be chanced
Hold such a place in our nation.
As to bring disgrace on our glorious land
By his low and disgraceful ambition.
The Goddess of Liberty bowed
Her head
Columbia frowned with strenuous vigor.
The American flag was trailed in the dust,
When Teddy dined with a nigger.
The American Eagle that soars upon high
Out of reach of the rifleman's sight and trigger,
Screamed a scream of utter disgust,
When Teddy dined with a nigger.
Even our Western Broncho has brayed with disgust;
And now wildly starts at the moon,
And has turned up his heels against the trusts,
Since Teddy ate with a coon.
And now the G. O. P. is all torn up
The wall of its members brings on a shiver.
And the best men in his party are ready to say,
Go Teddy and jump in the river.

PASTORS' S. S. INSTITUTE.

The Most Popular Sunday School Gathering in the South.

The Pastors' Sunday School Institute held in December of each year in Louisville is the most popular meeting of its kind in the South, if not in America. Though it is purely a State issue there are ten or twelve states represented each year. It is a rare thing that so many noted Sunday school experts are gotten together as at these institutes. If the Sunday school workers of our State could realize what an opportunity there would be for us to have such an outpouring that no house could hold them. The third of these institutes is to be held in Louisville, Dec. 5-9, 1904. Program and full particulars can be had from E. A. Fox, Louisville, Ky.

"Build up the System."

Hon. Joseph H. Ridgeway, Secretary of the American Anti-Traff Society, writes the following letter from the Grand Central Hotel, St. Paul, Minn.:

"It is with great pleasure that I endorse Peru-na as an honest medicinal, competent to do all it claims. I have used it several times and know of nothing that cures so completely, and at the same time builds up the system. "I have recommended it to a number of my friends and always feel that I do them a service for I know how satisfactory the results invariably are. I only wish every family had a bottle—it would save much sickness and doctor bills."—Joseph H. Ridgeway.

"I have recommended it to a number of my friends and always feel that I do them a service for I know how satisfactory the results invariably are. I only wish every family had a bottle—it would save much sickness and doctor bills."—Joseph H. Ridgeway.

"Feel Better Than for Five Years."

Mr. James B. Taylor, Roberts, Ind., writes: "I am at the present time entirely well. I can eat anything I ever could. I took five bottles of Peru-na, and feel better now than I have for five years. I have doctored with other doctors off and on for fifteen years, so I can recommend your medicine very highly for stomach troubles. I take great pleasure in thanking you for your free advice and Peru-na."—James B. Taylor.

"I Enjoy my Meals as I Used to."

Mr. J. W. Pritchard, Wolf Lake, Ind., writes: "I am pleased to say that I have been cured of catarrh of the stomach by Peru-na. I could hardly eat anything that agreed with me. Before I would get half through my meal my stomach would fill with gas causing me much distress and unpleasant feelings for an hour or two after each meal. But, thanks to your Peru-na, I am now completely cured, and can eat anything I want to without any of the distressing symptoms. I can now enjoy my meals as I used to do, and it is all due to Dr. Hartman and his wonderful medicine, Peru-na.

"It has been one year since I was cured, and I am all O. K. yet, so I know I am cured."—J. W. Pritchard.

Dyspepsia is a very common phase of summer catarrh. A remedy that will cure catarrh of one location will cure it anywhere. Peru-na cures catarrh wherever located. That it is a prompt and permanent cure for catarrh of the stomach the above letters testify.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

STORE AT MASONVILLE

Will Be Opened For Business Next Week.

Messrs. Ernest W. Steger and Grafton Dickson, under the firm name of E. W. Steger & Dickson, will open up a general merchandise store at Masonville next week. This is the new station on the Tennessee Central Railroad located at the M. A. Mason farm, formerly known as The Square. It is in one of the finest sections of Christian county, six miles from Hopkinsville. The new firm will handle everything usually kept in an up-to-date country store. The store will be opened for business some time next week, with a stock complete in all its departments.

MEET NEXT MAY

To Determine Whether Consolidation Shall Take Place.

The Cumberland Presbyterian church of the United States will hold its general assembly in Fresno, Cal., next May, to determine whether or not the joint report of the two committees of the Cumberland Presbyterian church and the Presbyterian church of the United States of America, recommending a union of the two, shall be ratified. Forty of the 114 presbyteries of the Cumberland Presbyterian church have already voted upon the question, twenty-six favoring the union and fourteen against.

VAST INDIAN EMPIRE

INTERESTING STATISTICS FROM ITS RECENT CENSUS.

As Large as All Europe with Russia Left Out—Many Races. Languages and Religions—Its Enormous Population.

Americans are very apt to boast in the presence of their British cousins of the millions of square miles in the United States, of the millions of inhabitants thereof, and seemingly forget that the listeners have full cause themselves to speak of broad domains of myriads of subjects.

The latest published census of India tells of 170,842 square miles, a population of 294,341,053! Let Brother Jonathan be a little slow in bragging of big numbers.

In addition to the provinces of India, directly under British administration, there are various feudatory states that acknowledge the supremacy of Great Britain. Malabar alone is equal in extent to all of England and Scotland. Rajpootana and central India are larger than the whole of the German empire. British India extends in extent the whole of Europe, if Russia is left out, and her peoples are as diversified as are the inhabitants of this great geographic subdivision. Diversified in race, language and religion.

The Hindu religion has by far the largest following in India, three-fourths of the population being of that faith. The Mohammedan comes next, with over 62,000,000 believers; the Buddhists are many, about 9,000,000, and almost equal to them in numbers are the Amisnians; the Sikhs have 2,000,000 followers, the Parsees 24,000. There are not many Jews in India, only 18,000. The new census gives the number of Christians as 2,925,241 of whom 2,643,312 are natives.

At last, after four decades of crown rule by the British crown, the Indian government is taking decisive steps toward a comprehensive survey of the races of the Indian empire—some considerable comprehension of the races being necessary in a land so given over to caste and race prejudice. In the important work of famine relief, especially, is there need of knowledge of race customs and peculiarities. In a country where some of the people prefer death to the eating of food cooked or served by an "infidel," it was well if the relief workers had sufficient acquaintance with the patients to avoid giving offence. Cases are known of sufferers having starved rather than enter the relief camps. Other cases have been to the attention of a number of Brahmins that lost their status because of eating in relief kitchens, and that were doomed to remain in a lower caste. A grievous sentence, indeed, to the Hindus.

But in spite of famine and pestilence, the population of India is rapidly increasing, the congestion of India is one of the problems of the English statesman of to-day is called upon to consider. A writer in the Spectator says: "The Indians, in fact, are swarming as the Irish once swarmed, and as the 'barbarous' races probably swarmed before they burst upon the Roman empire, and the human imagination gives way before the task of feeding them, which may be it remembered, thrown upon Great Britain." The population, which is thought to have been stationary for centuries preceding British rule, is now increasing with rapidity. The British look upon as startlingly rapid. It has increased 35,000,000 within the last 30 years. As the mass of the people are almost incredibly ignorant, an individual percentage being able to read and write, one cannot judge of India's progress by its numbers.

This new phase of the Indian question is truly a most perplexing one. Among suggestions offered towards lessening the impending danger of overcrowding, we quote the following: First, a redistribution of population, encouragement of migration to more thinly settled districts. Second, encouragement of manufactures in the country. Third, a readjustment of taxation, that the burden may fall more heavily upon wealth and less heavily upon the poor; tax the peasant as lightly as possible. But, so the student of the problem goes on to say: "These are palliatives only. They will not arrest, or even check, the multiplication of the people; and if that is not checked India must become by 1950 a huge congested district, or rather must resemble a Chinese province, where the people, laboring with incessant industry seven days a week for 14 hours a day, can still only keep alive, must reckon in coins of which there are 1,000 to a dollar, and feel an official demand for a rupee (about 30 cents) like a demand for a piece of silk."

MAX OWEN.

SOLVED BY ASTRONOMY.

The Age of Ancient Ruins Determined by the Way They Face the Sun.

An idea, ecclesiastical and architectural rather than mechanical, which was in vogue in ancient Egypt, and has found a wide application in later times, was embodied in the construction of heathen and Christian temples, says a recent article.

It was long the practice in Europe to arrange the axis of such edifices so as to point to the spot on the eastern horizon where the sun would rise on the festival of the saints to which they were devoted.

Within the last few months that principle has been used as the key to a complicated puzzle. Antiquarians were anxious to determine to which of four saints named Begg, a church in Dunkey Town, Ireland, was dedicated. In a paper read by Prof. Joseph P. O'Reilly before the Royal Irish Academy the author showed how the mystery was solved.

Taking aim between objects that corresponded to the sights on a gun at each end of the structure, he found that the sun would have been in range between April 11 and 15, and again between August 29 and September 2.

He therefore concluded that the church was erected in honor of the particular St. Begg, whose festival falls on September 3.

In many other instances the coincidence was much more precise, at least at the time of the erection of the sacred edifice. Afterward, owing to the influence with which astronomy are familiar, there would eventually be a slight shifting of the position on the horizon where the sun, or some other star that was employed instead as a celestial mark, would appear. Looking at, ascertaining the degree of variation that has since occurred, has been able to compute the age of certain ruined temples in Egypt.

That at Karnak, for instance, he believes to have been founded about 4700 B. C., or 5,600 years ago.

Inasmuch as the Chaldeans were also famous astronomers, it may be discovered some day that they, too, oriented their temples in the same way.

THREE OAKS IN ONE TUB.

Descendants of the Famous Charter Oak Being Carefully Nurtured in Baltimore.

Growing in a large tub at the residence of James Knowlden, of this city, says the Baltimore Sun, are three thriving "descendants" of the famous Charter oak. These sturdy little oaks of such renowned "lineage" will be transplanted in separate tubs in the autumn and if they continue to flourish Mr. Knowlden will present two of them to the city, one to be planted in Union hill and the other in Patterson Park.

When in Hartford, Conn., two years ago Mr. Knowlden secured eight acorns from the tree grown from a sprig of the Charter oak, which stands on the spot where that most famous tree in American history spread its branches for hundreds of years. He planted all, but five failed to germinate. He watched with tender care the three oaks that came up, bestowing as much attention upon them as if they were delicate flowers. They are now about a foot high and give promise of becoming strong trees.

When the Charter oak blew down the citizens of Hartford immediately planted a sprig from it on the spot where it had stood. The new tree thrived from the first and now its branches shade a considerable area. On every Fourth of July the Hartford people, augmented by many patriotic citizens of nearby towns, gather at the tree and decorate it with flags and bunting, after which the declaration of independence is read beneath its ever-spreading boughs.

The Charter oak itself was sawed up into lumber. From this a frame for the colonial charter was made. The frame, with its historic document, now hangs in the supreme court chamber in the capitol at Hartford. A chair was also made from the lumber and this is occupied by the lieutenant governor of Connecticut in the senate chamber.

ELECTION NEWS

Will Be Furnished to Lafayette By the Home Phones.

The Home Telephone Co., has secured a new force of men to take the place of those disabled by accidents on the county lines, and the stringing of wires to Lafayette will be completed this week. Mr. Hoge promises to have the line in operation by Monday, so the Lafayette people can get election news over it Tuesday night. Mr. Smith, the electrician, has gone to Chicago to secure some attachments. On the 11th inst. Mr. R. E. Cooper, President of the Company, will attend a conference of independent companies in Louisville to arrange for closing the gap between here and Henderson, which will put Hopkinsville in long-distance communication with the entire country.

AFTER ILLNESS

Of Few Days Miss Esther Lacy Dies.

Miss Esther Lacy, aged seventeen, daughter of Mr. C. F. Lacy, died Monday night at the home of her parents on South Virginia street, after an illness of about ten days. She was a complicated case with heart trouble.

Funeral services were held at the residence by Elder H. D. Smith Tuesday, and interment took place in Hopewell cemetery.

DIED IN PADUCAH.

Croner Peal Passes Away After Long Illness.

W. R. Peal, formerly of this place, died in Paducah a few days ago of a complication of diseases. He was 64 years old and had been county coroner of McCracken for several years. He was a native of Trigg county and was engaged in the tobacco business while a resident of this city.

He was sick for nearly a year.

VOTE ON SEWERS.

Bond Proposition Not Expected to Increase Taxes.

Only $30,000 of The $50,000 Authorized Will Likely Be Needed.

The proposition to issue city bonds to not exceed $50,000, for the construction of a sewerage system for Hopkinsville, will be voted on by the people next Tuesday.

The friends of the proposition assert that the city has paid $60,000 of bonds in 14 years and is now about completing $25,000 of street construction in the last three years and without increase of taxation. That these amounts will lessen future expenses to such an extent that the sewers can be built without increasing taxes to pay the interest on the bonds. It is claimed that a Chicago engineer recently here to look over the ground, approved Engineer McCloud's estimate and said $30,000 would be sufficient for the work. The system is to provide seven miles of sewers and septic tanks as needed. Of course the needs of such a public improvement are recognized by all. If the Council be given authority to act, the whole question of the kind of sewers can be brought up and settled on its merits. If a better system can be found than the one recommended, the Council will be free to adopt it.

Voters should not lose sight of this question Tuesday.

OFFICIAL BALLOTS

Will Be Easy to Vote Intelligently This Year.

The official ballot this year will not be as cumbersome as usual. On the ticket are the names of thirteen presidential electors to be chosen, one from each district and two from the state at large. The parties represented are the Republicans, Democrats, prohibitionists, People's Party, Socialists and the Socialist Labor party. The names of the electors are first on the ballot, then follow the names of the candidates for congress. They are: A. O. Stanley, Democrat; W. H. Overby, Republican.

In this city a bond tax proposition for a sewerage system will be submitted.

The easy and proper way to vote for a President will be to put a stamp under the Democratic device.

STRONG POINTS.

Campaign Issues as Summarized by Parker.

Administrative extravagance must be checked. There must be equal opportunity for all and special privileges for none.

This shall remain the government of laws, not of men.

There must be a reform of the tariff.

This nation will no more hold another people in perpetual bondage than it will tolerate the enslaving of individuals by the cities.

Overwhelming importance as are these issues; above them tower the questions:

Shall the partnership between Republican leaders and the trusts continue with profit to both and hurt to the country?

Shall the trust contributions of millions to the campaign fund secure the right to continue the wrongful taking of many millions a year from the people?

Card of Thanks.

The undersigned desire to express our thanks for the many kindnesses and courtesies shown by our neighbors and friends during the illness of our daughter, Esther, who died last Monday night. We shall always hold your attentions in grateful remembrance.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Lacy, Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 3.

Ten miners were being lowered into a shaft at Nanticoke, Pa., when the cage became unmanageable and dropped to the bottom, a distance of 700 feet. All the men were either crushed to death or drowned.

THEIR OLD TACTICS

Republicans Resort to Rowdiness to Break up a Rally.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 2.—Republicans made a futile attempt to break up the Democratic rally here, which was addressed last night by Judge Parker. The disturbance was made prior to Judge Parker's arrival. When Richard V. Lindbergh, the presiding officer, began an address opening the meeting he was greeted with loud cheers for Roosevelt from several hundred Republicans who were scattered about the hall.

The Democrats then began a counter demonstration, and after several minutes of great confusion succeeded in drowning out the shouts of the Republicans. Judge Parker, upon his arrival, was accorded a remarkable ovation and there were no other serious interruptions. Judge Parker later delivered two speeches in Jersey City, where he was received with great enthusiasm.

Injured in a Runaway.

Marshall Cook, who operates a saw mill in North Christian, was the victim of a serious accident a few days ago. Mr. Cook and his wife were out driving, when his horse ran off and both occupants of the vehicle were thrown out. Mrs. Cook was quite badly bruised and Mr. Cook sustained a fracture of the bones in one leg.

HALLOWEEN PRANKS.

Gates Unhinged And Other Tricks Played.

The usual Halloween pranks were indulged in Monday night and many citizens found their gates off the hinges and in some cases hanging on telephone poles. Mr. A. W. Pyle's lawn hose was set to playing on his front door and the hydrant key put out of sight. Mr. R. C. Hardwick's front door was barricaded with the flower pots on the front porch. No weapon mischief was done so far as heard, but only playful pranks indulged in. The papers report similar occurrences all over the country. Five killings have been reported as following Halloween pranks in other states.
